Legislative Assembly Proceedings, Monday, May 9, 2005

Conservation Minister Stan Struthers

http://www.gov.mb.ca/legislature/hansard/3rd-38th/vol_43/h43.html#con

Mr. Struthers: I think maybe the last protected area that I want to key in on a little bit is the UNESCO World Heritage site that we have been working on in conjunction with a number of First Nations in the area, in conjunction with Pikangikum from across the Ontario border and also in conjunction with the federal government. It is an example of what governments can do when they get together, take an issue seriously and really be guided by elders in communities, by chiefs and councils in communities that want and need to have a say in many of these issues.

Mr. Chomiak: “Mr. Speaker, one of the issues that came out very prominently in the hearings, the over 80 community hearings that were held with residents of the east side, was broad-based support that that area of the province be declared a UNESCO World Heritage site to preserve the boreal forest, to preserve the natural state, and to preserve the economic way of life of people in those communities.”

“This past year we:

Committed to a proposal for a Boreal Forest region on the east side of Lake Winnipeg as a UNESCO World Heritage Site”

Government of Manitoba Budget Speech, March 8th 2005, Finance Minister Selinger

In the speech, Finance Minister Greg Selinger stated that Manitoba had "committed to a proposal for a Boreal Forest region on the east side of Lake Winnipeg as a UNESCO World Heritage Site".

Manitoba New Democrat, Interview with Conservation Minister Stan Struthers, Winter 2005

The NDP government recently announced that it would be leading the campaign to have the boreal forest on the east side of Lake Winnipeg declared a UNESCO World Heritage Site. Why did it make this decision?

Stan Struthers;

“ ...One of the report’s recommendations was that the Manitoba government play an active role in promoting the [World Heritage Site] site in order to protect the integrity of the boreal environment. The site would include the traditional territories...as a protected area in their sacred trust. We’re embracing this recommendation because it’s the right thing to do. It’s the right thing to do not only in terms of promoting eco-tourism and recognizing the hard work of the Aboriginal communities in safeguarding their traditional territories, but most of all in terms of finally, respecting the decisions of the people of the east side concerning their own way of life and respecting the treaties we signed so many years ago.”

Correspondence, Conservation Minister Stan Struthers, January 21, 2005 to Gaile Whelan Enns, Director, Manitoba Wildlands

“As you are aware, on December 3rd (2004), I announced the Province’s support for the nomination of a UNESCO World Heritage Site on the East Side.”

CBC Radio interview, Conservation Minister Stan Struthers, December 17, 2005

CBC Host: The East Side of Lake Winnipeg is proposed to become a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Struthers: “I think it would be a very high level of distinction for our province to have this type of a site located here in Manitoba, designated in Manitoba and Northern Ontario. I think it’s a wonderful step forwards in terms of land use planning and involving the First Nations people ... The bulk of the credit goes to the chiefs, councilors and elders from places like Paungaussi, and Poplar River, and Little Grand Rapids, and Pikangika over on the Ontario side.... I think the First Nations have shown a lot of foresight on this and I’m just really glad that we’re, as the provincial government cooperating with them in order to make this happen.”

CBC Host: “Right, and what do you think this could do for the Hydro plants in this area?”

Struthers: “Well, one of the things I think is very positive in this is is the approach Manitoba Hydro has taken; they are looking at alternative routes. They are looking at ways that we can carry that power from our North into other jurisdictions that now rely on dirty old coal to provide power. Hydro, I think has taken a very mature approach to this, considered the First Nations along the East Side of Lake Winnipeg and support, actually, through a resolution, the designation of a UNESCO World Heritage Site in this province.... They (UNESCO) are very impressed with the work Poplar River has done and they were very impressed that our government, I, met with chiefs of the area to talk about interim protection while the chiefs, councils and elders consider the land use plans that they’re going to put in place in their own traditional areas.”

The province has already announced its support for the nomination of a UNESCO World Heritage Site on the east side.

Conservation Minister Stan Struthers

World Heritage Site Announcement, December 3, 2004

“We are pleased to support the Accord First Nations, to make the dream of a World Heritage Site come true... (and) ensure the protection of these lands for generations to come... (This will) show that Manitoba is a world conservation leader.”

“We want to be able to ensure the area is protected, with minimal impact from economic activities.”

In addition, the province announced its full support for the nomination of the UNESCO world heritage site encompassing 43,000 square kilometers spanning the Manitoba- Ontario border. "The support was made possible with the foresight used in the creation of Atikaki Wilderness park in the 1980s and the foresight and hard work of local First Nations in putting forward their traditional territories that they have looked after for generations," said Doer. "We are committed to working closely with the accord First Nations governments and the governments of Ontario and Canada to bring the dream of a UNESCO site to reality."

- Participation in a campaign to designate the boreal forest on the east side of Lake Winnipeg as a UNESCO World Heritage Site.

Government of Manitoba Speech From the Throne November 22, 2004

"Since 1999, over one million hectares of Manitoba wilderness have received new or renewed protected status. The coming year will see additional designations of protected areas and ecological reserves, including the nomination of a pristine Boreal Forest region on the east side of Lake Winnipeg as a UNESCO World Heritage Site."

"The site that is being nominated is 43,000 square kilometers in total – roughly the size of Nova Scotia – and would join the Atikaki Wilderness Park with Ontario's Woodland Caribou Park and adjacent First Nation Lands. The UNESCO designation is a recommendation of the East Side planning initiative."

Recommendation 5.3.2

The Government of Manitoba plays an active role with the federal government in establishing a UNESCO (U.N.) World Natural & Cultural Heritage Site on the east side. The site should include the land area encompassed in the application by the five First Nations signatory to the protected areas Accord, and Atikaki and Woodland Caribou Provincial Parks.
